

Julie Davis – Development Director
Washington Women’s Employment & Education

Julie Davis is committed to advancing the cause of disadvantaged women and children. After seven years at Procter & Gamble and 10 years at Weyerhaeuser, Davis joined WWEE in 2004. Procter & Gamble was a proponent of having its managers gain experience across multiple disciplines, including brand management, sales and marketing, so Davis came to WWEE with a broad background of transferable budgeting, planning and management skills she has applied in the nonprofit world.

WWEE's mission fits smoothly with Davis's values and her passion for working with the community. Before joining WWEE, she volunteered at the YWCA in Seattle as Chair of the Community Advisory Board for Dress for Success Seattle and worked at the Boomtown Café, which served low-income, homeless and mentally ill people who live on the streets of Seattle.

Davis earned a bachelor's degree in chemical engineering from Auburn University, Auburn, AL. She is a member of the Federal Way Human Services Commission, active in her children’s schools, local church and is a member of City Club, a non-partisan, nonprofit organization dedicated to informing citizens and building community leadership in the greater Seattle region.
